Hanoch Yerushalmi

‘Reshaping the self-as-therapist in supervision’

Scholars believe that accumulating experiences of self-alienation and falsehood urge us to reshape ourselves, sometimes through experimenting with different ways of being and acting. In this presentation, Hanoch will speak about therapists’ struggles to reshape their professional selves and suggest three ways in which supervision can facilitate this process: a. Fostering the supervisees’ internal dialogue between different therapeutic voices including those of their supervisors. b. Constructing and consolidating the supervisees’ “future selves;” how they envision themselves as therapists in the future. c. Constructing and facilitating supervisees’ experimentation with different versions of the self on the prelinguistic and linguistic levels.

Hanoch Yerushalmi, Ph.D. is a consultant to Psychoanalytic Social Work, USA, and last September guest-edited a special issue on supervision for the American Journal of Psychoanalysis. He is a Clinical Psychologist and a Professor Emeritus at the Department of Community Mental Health of the University of Haifa, Israel and is a member of BAPPS. He has formerly been the Director of the Student Counselling Centre and a Senior Lecturer at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. Prof. Yerushalmi served as a consultant to psychotherapy centres in Israel, the USA and Central America and has published numerous articles on relational psychoanalytic therapy, supervision and therapists’ development, crisis and growth, and psychiatric rehabilitation. This Masterclass is based on a published article: Yerushalmi, H. (2020). Reshaping the self-as-therapist in supervision. Psychoanalytic Social Work [In Press], DOI:10.1080/15228878.2020.1797513)
